Interesting First Lady Trivia

Elizabeth Ann Bloomer divorced her fist husband, William Warren, in 1947; she married Gerald Ford a year later.

During some years in high school, she opened her own dance school, renting space to use as a studio where she taught children, adults at , Grand Rapids, approximately 1935-1937, earning fifty cents for each child student. For four consecutive summers, she also taught dance at Stone Lake, Michigan, summers 1937, 1938, 1939, 1940. She recalled teaching some of the era's most popular dance such as the fox trot, waltz, and Big Apple.

As a young girl and young woman, Betty Bloomer was physically healthy, enjoying sports and strenuous exercise, often seeking to participate in competitive sports like ice hockey and football that were dominated by men, resulting in part from the
